

Henderson returns to Workforce Housing Coalition

PORTSMOUTH - Lisa Henderson recently returned as the program director of the Workforce Housing Coalition of the Greater Seacoast after three and a half years working for other community based ventures.

Lisa Henderson

Most recently, Henderson served as associate director of Squamscott Community Commons, which is developing a community center and YMCA in Exeter to serve the larger region. Prior to this, Lisa was the senior deputy director of Fannie Mae's Northern New England Community Business Center, where her main responsibility was to source affordable housing investment opportunities in Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire.

She spent the nine years prior at The Housing Partnership, a non-profit affordable housing developer based in Portsmouth, working in a variety of capacities from fund-raising to work force housing advocacy to serving as their interim director.

Henderson holds a Bachelors degree in Community Development from the University of New Hampshire and is currently pursuing a Masters degree in Community Economic Development at Southern New Hampshire University. She lives in Newmarket with her husband, Paul, and young son, Kyle.